FOXTON GRADED READERS

Level-2 GRADING SYLLABUS

 should/need to → You should finish your food. must/must not → You must not smoke here. have to/has to/had to → I have to be home by eight. be going to, will → I am going to watch a movie tonight. simple past tense → They stayed at a hotel last night. common adjectives → It was a fantastic movie! common adverbs → The weather was extremely cold. common prepositions → They live in London. some, few, many, much → She has many friends. and, but, or → Dorothy and her friends are playing outstands. very, so, too → I am so scared! before, after, when → I called him after I finished my work. because, so → They played well so they won. adverbs of manner → He speaks English fluently. simple gerunds and infinitives → Mike enjoys meeting new people. imperative → Sit down! simple relative clauses → They were having a party last night. conjunctions of time → She fainted when she heard the news. present perfect tense → I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) → He hasn't had his breakfast yet. 	Grammatical Structures		Examples
 can/cannot → He can swim. could/couldn't → She couldn't submit her essay on time. should/need to → You should finish your food. must/must not → You must not smoke here. have to/has to/had to → I have to be home by eight. be going to, will → I am going to watch a movie tonight. simple past tense → They stayed at a hotel last night. common adjectives → It was a fantastic movie! common adverbs → The weather was extremely cold. common prepositions → They live in London. some, few, many, much → She has many friends. and, but, or → Dorothy and her friends are playing outst. very, so, too → I am so scared! before, after, when → I called him after I finished my work. because, so → They played well so they won. adverbs of manner → He speaks English fluently. simple gerunds and infinitives → Mike enjoys meeting new people. imperative → Sit down! simple relative clauses → They were having a party last night. conjunctions of time → She fainted when she heard the news. present perfect tense → I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) → He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) → I would like to drink some tea. 	• simple present tense	\rightarrow	Jeremy works hard.
• could/couldn't \rightarrow She couldn't submit her essay on time.• should/need to \rightarrow You should finish your food.• must/must not \rightarrow You must not smoke here.• have to/has to/had to \rightarrow I have to be home by eight.• be going to, will \rightarrow I am going to watch a movie tonight.• simple past tense \rightarrow They stayed at a hotel last night.• common adjectives \rightarrow It was a fantastic movie!• common adverbs \rightarrow The weather was extremely cold.• common prepositions \rightarrow They live in London.• some, few, many, much \rightarrow She has many friends.• and, but, or \rightarrow I called him after I finished my work.• before, after, when \rightarrow I called him after I finished my work.• because, so \rightarrow The yaped well so they won.• adverbs of manner \rightarrow He speaks English fluently.• simple gerunds and infinitives \rightarrow Mike enjoys meeting new people.• imperative \rightarrow She fainted when she heard the news.• present perfect tense \rightarrow I have been to Spain twice before.• adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) \rightarrow He hasn't had his breakfast yet.• you don't like him, do you? \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	 present continuous tense 	\rightarrow	Kate is looking for her purse
 should/need to → You should finish your food. must/must not → You must not smoke here. have to/has to/had to → I have to be home by eight. be going to, will → I am going to watch a movie tonight. simple past tense → They stayed at a hotel last night. common adjectives → It was a fantastic movie! common adverbs → The weather was extremely cold. common prepositions → They live in London. some, few, many, much → She has many friends. and, but, or → Dorothy and her friends are playing outstice very, so, too → I am so scared! before, after, when → I called him after I finished my work. because, so → They played well so they won. adverbs of manner → He speaks English fluently. simple gerunds and infinitives → Mike enjoys meeting new people. imperative → Sit down! simple relative clauses → They were having a party last night. conjunctions of time → She fainted when she heard the news. present perfect tense → I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) → He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) → I would like to drink some tea. 	• can/cannot	\rightarrow	He can swim.
• must/must not \rightarrow You must not smoke here.• have to/has to/had to \rightarrow I have to be home by eight.• be going to, will \rightarrow I am going to watch a movie tonight.• simple past tense \rightarrow They stayed at a hotel last night.• common adjectives \rightarrow I t was a fantastic movie!• common adverbs \rightarrow The weather was extremely cold.• common prepositions \rightarrow They live in London.• some, few, many, much \rightarrow She has many friends.• and, but, or \rightarrow Dorothy and her friends are playing outst.• very, so, too \rightarrow I am so scared!• before, after, when \rightarrow I called him after I finished my work.• because, so \rightarrow They played well so they won.• adverbs of manner \rightarrow He speaks English fluently.• simple gerunds and infinitives \rightarrow Sit down!• simple relative clauses \rightarrow The man who is over there is my father• past continuous tense \rightarrow They were having a party last night.• conjunctions of time \rightarrow She fainted when she heard the news.• present perfect tense \rightarrow I have been to Spain twice before.• adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) \rightarrow He hasn't had his breakfast yet.• type-1 conditional (if-clauses) \rightarrow If you work hard, you will be successfere.• would like + to infinitive \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	• could/couldn't	\rightarrow	She couldn't submit her essay on time.
 have to/has to/had to → I have to be home by eight. be going to, will → I am going to watch a movie tonight. simple past tense → They stayed at a hotel last night. common adjectives → It was a fantastic movie! common adverbs → The weather was extremely cold. common prepositions → They live in London. some, few, many, much → She has many friends. and, but, or → Dorothy and her friends are playing outst very, so, too → I am so scared! before, after, when → I called him after I finished my work. because, so → They played well so they won. adverbs of manner → He speaks English fluently. simple gerunds and infinitives → Mike enjoys meeting new people. imperative → Sit down! simple relative clauses → They were having a party last night. conjunctions of time → She fainted when she heard the news. present perfect tense → I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) → He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) → You don't like him, do you? would like + to infinitive 	 should/need to 	\rightarrow	You should finish your food.
 be going to, will → I am going to watch a movie tonight. simple past tense → They stayed at a hotel last night. common adjectives → It was a fantastic movie! common adverbs → The weather was extremely cold. common prepositions → They live in London. some, few, many, much → She has many friends. and, but, or → Dorothy and her friends are playing outset. very, so, too → I am so scared! before, after, when → I called him after I finished my work. because, so → They played well so they won. adverbs of manner → He speaks English fluently. simple gerunds and infinitives → Mike enjoys meeting new people. imperative → Sit down! simple relative clauses → They were having a party last night. conjunctions of time → She fainted when she heard the news. present perfect tense → I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) → He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) → I would like to drink some tea. 	• must/must not	\rightarrow	You must not smoke here.
 simple past tense common adjectives It was a fantastic movie! common adverbs It was a fantastic movie! common prepositions The weather was extremely cold. common prepositions They live in London. some, few, many, much She has many friends. and, but, or Dorothy and her friends are playing outs. very, so, too I am so scared! before, after, when I called him after I finished my work. because, so They played well so they won. adverbs of manner He speaks English fluently. simple gerunds and infinitives Mike enjoys meeting new people. imperative Sit down! simple relative clauses The man who is over there is my fathe. present perfect tense I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) You don't like him, do you? would like + to infinitive 	 have to/has to/had to 	\rightarrow	I have to be home by eight.
 common adjectives → It was a fantastic movie! common adverbs → The weather was extremely cold. common prepositions → They live in London. some, few, many, much → She has many friends. and, but, or → Dorothy and her friends are playing outst. very, so, too → I am so scared! before, after, when → I called him after I finished my work. because, so → They played well so they won. adverbs of manner → He speaks English fluently. simple gerunds and infinitives → Mike enjoys meeting new people. imperative → Sit down! simple relative clauses → They were having a party last night. conjunctions of time → She fainted when she heard the news. present perfect tense → I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) → He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) → I you don't like him, do you? would like + to infinitive → I would like to drink some tea. 	• be going to, will	\rightarrow	I am going to watch a movie tonight.
• common adverbs → The weather was extremely cold. • common prepositions → They live in London. • some, few, many, much → She has many friends. • and, but, or → Dorothy and her friends are playing outsuidation. • very, so, too → I am so scared! • before, after, when → I called him after I finished my work. • because, so → They played well so they won. • adverbs of manner → He speaks English fluently. • simple gerunds and infinitives → Mike enjoys meeting new people. • imperative → Sit down! • simple relative clauses → They were having a party last night. • conjunctions of time → She fainted when she heard the news. • present perfect tense → I have been to Spain twice before. • adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) → He hasn't had his breakfast yet. • type-1 conditional (if-clauses) → If you work hard, you will be successfalled would like to drink some tea.	• simple past tense	\rightarrow	They stayed at a hotel last night.
\circ common prepositions \rightarrow They live in London. \circ some, few, many, much \rightarrow She has many friends. \circ and, but, or \rightarrow Dorothy and her friends are playing outsuidation \circ very, so, too \rightarrow I am so scared! \circ before, after, when \rightarrow I called him after I finished my work. \circ because, so \rightarrow They played well so they won. \circ adverbs of manner \rightarrow He speaks English fluently. \circ simple gerunds and infinitives \rightarrow Mike enjoys meeting new people. \circ imperative \rightarrow Sit down! \circ simple relative clauses \rightarrow They were having a party last night. \circ conjunctions of time \rightarrow She fainted when she heard the news. \circ present perfect tense \rightarrow I have been to Spain twice before. \circ adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) \rightarrow He hasn't had his breakfast yet. \circ type-1 conditional (if-clauses) \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	 common adjectives 	\rightarrow	It was a fantastic movie!
 some, few, many, much → She has many friends. and, but, or → Dorothy and her friends are playing outstands. very, so, too → I am so scared! before, after, when → I called him after I finished my work. because, so → They played well so they won. adverbs of manner → He speaks English fluently. simple gerunds and infinitives → Mike enjoys meeting new people. imperative → Sit down! simple relative clauses → They were having a party last night. conjunctions of time → She fainted when she heard the news. present perfect tense → I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) → He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) → If you work hard, you will be successfere. would like + to infinitive → I would like to drink some tea. 	• common adverbs	\rightarrow	The weather was extremely cold.
 and, but, or Dorothy and her friends are playing outstilled very, so, too I am so scared! before, after, when I called him after I finished my work. because, so They played well so they won. adverbs of manner He speaks English fluently. simple gerunds and infinitives Mike enjoys meeting new people. imperative Sit down! Simple relative clauses The man who is over there is my father past continuous tense They were having a party last night. conjunctions of time She fainted when she heard the news. present perfect tense I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) You don't like him, do you? would like + to infinitive I would like to drink some tea. 	 common prepositions 	\rightarrow	They live in London.
• very, so, too \rightarrow I am so scared!• before, after, when \rightarrow I called him after I finished my work.• because, so \rightarrow They played well so they won.• adverbs of manner \rightarrow He speaks English fluently.• simple gerunds and infinitives \rightarrow Mike enjoys meeting new people.• imperative \rightarrow Sit down!• simple relative clauses \rightarrow They were having a party last night.• conjunctions of time \rightarrow She fainted when she heard the news.• present perfect tense \rightarrow I have been to Spain twice before.• adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) \rightarrow He hasn't had his breakfast yet.• type-1 conditional (if-clauses) \rightarrow If you work hard, you will be successfeller• would like + to infinitive \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	• some, few, many, much	\rightarrow	She has many friends.
• before, after, when \rightarrow I called him after I finished my work.• because, so \rightarrow They played well so they won.• adverbs of manner \rightarrow He speaks English fluently.• simple gerunds and infinitives \rightarrow Mike enjoys meeting new people.• imperative \rightarrow Sit down!• simple relative clauses \rightarrow The man who is over there is my father• past continuous tense \rightarrow They were having a party last night.• conjunctions of time \rightarrow She fainted when she heard the news.• present perfect tense \rightarrow I have been to Spain twice before.• adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) \rightarrow He hasn't had his breakfast yet.• type-1 conditional (if-clauses) \rightarrow If you work hard, you will be successful• would like + to infinitive \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	• and, but, or	\rightarrow	Dorothy and her friends are playing outside because, so adverbs of manner He speaks English fluently. simple gerunds and infinitives Mike enjoys meeting new people. imperative Sit down! Sit down! simple relative clauses The man who is over there is my father past continuous tense They were having a party last night. conjunctions of time She fainted when she heard the news. present perfect tense I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) If you work hard, you will be successful simple question tags You don't like him, do you? would like + to infinitive I would like to drink some tea. 	• very, so, too	\rightarrow	I am so scared!
 adverbs of manner dverbs of manner He speaks English fluently. simple gerunds and infinitives Mike enjoys meeting new people. imperative Sit down! Sit down! Simple relative clauses The man who is over there is my father past continuous tense They were having a party last night. conjunctions of time She fainted when she heard the news. present perfect tense I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) If you work hard, you will be successful successful the function of the successful the	• before, after, when	\rightarrow	I called him after I finished my work.
• simple gerunds and infinitives \rightarrow Mike enjoys meeting new people.• imperative \rightarrow Sit down!• simple relative clauses \rightarrow The man who is over there is my father• past continuous tense \rightarrow They were having a party last night.• conjunctions of time \rightarrow She fainted when she heard the news.• present perfect tense \rightarrow I have been to Spain twice before.• adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) \rightarrow He hasn't had his breakfast yet.• type-1 conditional (if-clauses) \rightarrow If you work hard, you will be successfere.• simple question tags \rightarrow You don't like him, do you?• would like + to infinitive \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	• because, so	\rightarrow	They played well so they won.
• imperative \rightarrow Sit down!• simple relative clauses \rightarrow The man who is over there is my father• past continuous tense \rightarrow They were having a party last night.• conjunctions of time \rightarrow She fainted when she heard the news.• present perfect tense \rightarrow I have been to Spain twice before.• adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) \rightarrow He hasn't had his breakfast yet.• type-1 conditional (if-clauses) \rightarrow If you work hard, you will be successfere.• simple question tags \rightarrow You don't like him, do you?• would like + to infinitive \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	 adverbs of manner 	\rightarrow	He speaks English fluently.
• simple relative clauses \rightarrow The man who is over there is my father• past continuous tense \rightarrow They were having a party last night.• conjunctions of time \rightarrow She fainted when she heard the news.• present perfect tense \rightarrow I have been to Spain twice before.• adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) \rightarrow He hasn't had his breakfast yet.• type-1 conditional (if-clauses) \rightarrow If you work hard, you will be successful• simple question tags \rightarrow You don't like him, do you?• would like + to infinitive \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	 simple gerunds and infinitives 	\rightarrow	Mike enjoys meeting new people.
• past continuous tense \rightarrow They were having a party last night.• conjunctions of time \rightarrow She fainted when she heard the news.• present perfect tense \rightarrow I have been to Spain twice before.• adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) \rightarrow He hasn't had his breakfast yet.• type-1 conditional (if-clauses) \rightarrow If you work hard, you will be successfere.• simple question tags \rightarrow You don't like him, do you?• would like + to infinitive \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	• imperative	\rightarrow	Sit down!
• conjunctions of time \rightarrow She fainted when she heard the news.• present perfect tense \rightarrow I have been to Spain twice before.• adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) \rightarrow He hasn't had his breakfast yet.• type-1 conditional (if-clauses) \rightarrow If you work hard, you will be successfere.• simple question tags \rightarrow You don't like him, do you?• would like + to infinitive \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	 simple relative clauses 	\rightarrow	The man who is over there is my father.
 present perfect tense → I have been to Spain twice before. adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) → He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) → If you work hard, you will be successful simple question tags → You don't like him, do you? would like + to infinitive → I would like to drink some tea. 	 past continuous tense 	\rightarrow	They were having a party last night.
 adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still) → He hasn't had his breakfast yet. type-1 conditional (if-clauses) → If you work hard, you will be successference of the structure of the structure	 conjunctions of time 	\rightarrow	She fainted when she heard the news.
 type-1 conditional (if-clauses) → If you work hard, you will be successful or simple question tags → You don't like him, do you? would like + to infinitive → I would like to drink some tea. 	 present perfect tense 	\rightarrow	I have been to Spain twice before.
• simple question tags \rightarrow You don't like him, do you?• would like + to infinitive \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	• adverbs of time (already, just, yet, still	$) \rightarrow$	He hasn't had his breakfast yet.
• would like + to infinitive \rightarrow I would like to drink some tea.	• type-1 conditional (if-clauses)	\rightarrow	If you work hard, you will be successful.
	 simple question tags 	\rightarrow	You don't like him, do you?
• rare use of indirect statements \rightarrow He said that the exam was quite hard.	 would like + to infinitive 	\rightarrow	I would like to drink some tea.
	 rare use of indirect statements 	\rightarrow	He said that the exam was quite hard.